
November 25, 2013, American Fork, Utah – On December 7th, recording artists Daniel Beck and Jessie Funk join the American Heritage Lyceum Philharmonic and American Heritage Youth Chorus for its sixth annual Christmas concert program. The matinee and evening concerts will include a hundred-piece orchestra and a 150-voice choir. These student and professional performers aim to educate and entertain by bringing audiences closer to Christ and each other this Christmastime.

Each year, American Heritage School is in a unique position to celebrate the season with a true focus on Christ and families. There are a number of Christmas concerts presented each year, and those who have been to American Heritage concerts before know that we are able to be bold and reach families with the true spirit of Christmas while we entertain our audiences.

Lyceum Philharmonic Director Kayson Brown said, “Many in our community know the Lyceum Philharmonic from its YouTube videos with The Piano Guys, or may have seen the orchestra performing last month with Jackie Evancho and the Trans-Siberian Orchestra at the Conference Center, but it is not until you are able to see these students really using their talents to bring the true spirit of Christmas to audiences that you get a sincere appreciation for both their talent and their testimony.”

Brown continued, “We first got to know Daniel Beck when the Lyceum Philharmonic and Daniel were both performing at the Stadium of Fire’s Freedom Festival in 2011. He has an AMAZING voice. If you don’t know his name, you will certainly recognize his voice. I hear him every week on Sunday radio programming and for good reason; he is without a doubt one of Utah’s rising stars!”

Daniel Beck said, "I couldn't be more thrilled to be performing with the Lyceum Philharmonic! When Kayson asked me to join them for this year’s Christmas concert, I could hardly contain my excitement. To be able to perform with a choir and full live orchestra filled with such talented young musicians is THE ultimate performing experience for me. I look forward to what will be wonderful concert.

“Jessie Funk is well known to most Utah audiences,” Brown said. “Her five solo albums and extensive performing career have made her a household name. This is our first opportunity to collaborate with Jessie and we are so impressed with her musicality, spirit and example.”

Jessie Funk said, “I feel so honored to have the opportunity to perform with the Lyceum Philharmonic. The gift that Kayson is giving these beautiful children is so priceless. Music is so powerful and will forever help them remember their power!”

Head of School Grant Beckwith said, “True to American Heritage School’s form, this annual concert is a one-of-kind celebration of the heritage of Christmas and the spirit of Christ in American History. We invite you to join us, enjoy the concerts, and help us continue our work of faith-based education for the rising generation.”
